One day Sultan Shahryar discovered that his first wife had cheated on him with another man. Since then he decided to marry a new virgin every day and cut her head off at dawn. Thus, he would avoid being disgraced again. Scheherazade, the daughter of the vizier, agreed to marry the cruel monarch. To avoid death after the wedding, she started to tell a tale without ending which ignited great curiosity in her husband and saved her from being beheaded. After one thousand and one nights of telling tales, Scheherazade turned the sultan into a good, loving and kind man.
